

Dear Students,

It is almost spring and I cannot wait to start the new term. Being stuck at home for an extended period does no one any good. It is my wish that you would be able to meet your classmates again, have fun and learn many new things as soon as possible.

In the meantime, I hope that you will use your time wisely. Even though you cannot attend English classes right now, there are many ways to keep your skills sharp. Try to get your new textbooks as quickly as possible, page through them, look up unfamiliar words, and read some of the stories. In particular, do the first week of the Online Chesscool activities. Also, speak English with your family members, watch some entertaining English movies, and read some exciting English books. You can even send KakaoTalk messages in English to your classmates. The possibilities are endless!

Take care of yourself and see you soon,

Louis
